

Wireframe Design Choices

On each page of my website, I plan to have a large graphic with my name at the top. This will provide consistency to the site as each page will have a common header. The navigation will also stay constant underneath the header. I find the pattern of horizontal navigation boxes across the top to be easy-to-use as users will understand the various pages on the site when viewing the top of the page. This navigation style is also aesthetically appealing as it conveys consistency and provides spacing between the header and content of each individual page.

The landing and resume pages will each have the same format. Content for each of these pages are laid out as large boxes as the information for each of these pages is closely related. The portfolio page will be broken into horizontal boxes based on the type of work that is displayed. This will provide organization to the portfolio pieces. On the bio and contact pages, I plan to break the content into three spaces. This differs from the other pages as these pages have content which can be divided into categories. For example, the contact page will be split into Twitter, Facebook, and email sections. Using this format, these pages will be aesthetically pleasing as they will appear to be well-structured and well-organized.
